

The Highline – 11-08-08 Volume 3: Issue: 45

Hello Everyone!

I hope everyone had a good week. It's Sunday and I'm enjoying the quiet comfort of being in my house and watching the fire in my fireplace. It's been raining for the last couple of days here and it's nice to be snuggled up all warm and dry on the couch. Actually, we got our first snow of the season at the beginning of the week. It was the kind of snowfall that makes you feel like you're in the middle of a snow globe, peaceful with big soft flakes that stack up on the fence posts.

Well, with all the parents gone this week you would think that the old saying "when the cats are away the mice will play," would hold up. That however, was not the case. Actually, it was business as usual and a lot got done this week.

We started the process of pulling all of the shoes off the horses and checking their teeth. I don't think they enjoyed the dentist much, but getting to be footloose and fancy free all winter is definitely one of the perks of their jobs.

Junior spent most of the week dragging the fields with the big John Deere. Rain, snow, or shine he was out there. It was a little slow going with all the mud that the rain and snow had created, but I think he actually got them all finished.

All of the momma cows got moved to a different pasture, they're now out in front of Randy and Dori's place. They'll be there for the next couple of weeks until we move them to their wintering grounds on the end of the ranch. We even got Kathy out the lodge for the day to help us get them all gathered up. It was neat to get her out on a horse again.

She even came out with Wes and me while we were working with some of our younger horses. Now that everything has slowed down we are really getting some time to work on horsemanship. I can't wait till Shayne and Randy get back from the clinic. They keep talking about all the cool stuff we're going to get into with these colts and it sounds like fun.

I can't wait to hear about all of the happenings of the clinics. It sounds like they had a really great time.

Well, here comes winter and I know that I'm ready for it. It might sound strange, but I can't wait for the snow to get here and the hibernating to start. What can I say; I'm a big fan of being comfy and cozy. I hope everyone has a comfy, cozy, and otherwise good week.

Brianna
