Hello guys and gals!

It's Saturday morning and the sun is shining brightly in a deep blue, cloudless sky. The reflection on the snow makes the meadows look as if they are full of diamonds. With a high of 40 degrees today, it can't get much more beautiful for early February!

We had a very productive week here at the ranch. The boys spent the first part of the week gathering, cutting and stacking the last of the firewood for this winter season while Erin took care of some big cleaning projects in the lodge. For the second half of the week, the crew cleaned and oiled every single saddle, saddle bag, headstall and set of chaps we have here! Everything looks amazing!

Colby's working hard. They really got those saddles cleaned up nicely!

The office no longer looks like a tornado ran through it either ;) I'm blown away by how many bookings we've already gotten this season. So many of them are folks looking for quality horsemanship!

I spoke with Dori this morning as she described day one of the Legacy of Legends. She told me how much fun it's been seeing all of our friends/guests and hearing about the changes in their lives toward pursuing this style of horsemanship. It is truly humbling how many lives McGinnis Meadows has touched.

She said that Shayne and Randy have been doing great! I wouldn't expect to hear anything less. Those two have definitely earned everything they've accomplished with their horses and horsemanship. I can't wait to see more pictures and get more updates!

Here's some pics of Shayne and Randy working with their ponies in Vegas

It sounds like everyone is enjoying the warm weather out there. Dori and Janet were working on their tans while watching the guys ride.

I'm sure Shayne and Randy will be coming back with lots of good stuff to show us in the coming weeks and months.

Well, have a great weekend everyone!
